

I am angered and dismayed at the recent decision to change the broadcast ownership regulations. It is my belief that the FCC should be protecting all forms of media for the people and operating in the interests of democracy not business. Media today is an incredibly valuable public resource that must be protected by the government. What is the goal with this change of policy? To better serve the people? The only conclusion I can draw from this is that business is best served by the further consolidation of media. This is a wrong change in regulation, and just watch the activity in your local market among independent media players. They will be squeezed out of the market along with independent thinking.